

Victoria Francis Tobey Mueller Bravery Award

About the Award:

Victoria Francis Tobey Mueller's life was an inspiration to her family and friends. She exemplified the innate Bravery of the Anishinabe people through her actions and has motivated many in her immediate family to achieve success in life and give back to their people.

Born in Honey Harbour, Ontario on March 22, 1909 to Peter [Anawmedabe] & Delina Tobey she inherited her Mother's gift for healing, and her Father's belief in continuing education.

During the summers in Honey Harbour, Medical Doctors would vacation at local cottages and when needed provided their expertise to the local people even though most all health was maintained and sickness handled by traditional Indian herbal remedies.

Through these interactions with the visiting Medical Doctors, Victoria was encouraged to become formally educated as a nurse. In order to do so, she would need to move to Buffalo, New York and attend a Nursing School. Victoria moved away without knowing anyone and became a Nurse, but never forgot her roots. She maintained a close relationship with family and passed on her passion for helping others to her children.
